

Resilience

I recently heard a performance by the Ukrainian Children's Choir on the news and was astonished by the pure beauty of their performance - true joy. How I wondered, in the midst of living in such chaos and tragedy, are they capable of sharing such a gift with those of us who enjoy waking up each day to our safe, normal routine?

I've decided it's because those voices carry hope. The music heals them as they struggle to live through uncertainty in their everyday lives. Their voices spread the message that humanity will prevail, and that there will be a better tomorrow.

Sending you hope, joy, and resilience through their voices -
